The last half of my life was spent at one of those painful epochs of human history, during which the world seemed to be getting worse; where past victories which had seemed to be definitive have turned out to be only temporary. When I was young, Victorian optimism was taken for granted. It was thought that freedom and prosperity would spread gradually throughout the world through an ordinary process, and it was hoped that cruelty, tyranny and injustice would continually diminish. Hardly anyone was haunted by the fear of great wars. Hardly anyone thought of the nineteenth century as a brief interlude between past and future barbarism.

There is a lovely lady
Whom I have often seen;
She's fair and bright and beautiful
And she was born a queen.

She looks both mild and gentle
Though she lives in regal state;
And her attendants nobles
In countless myriads wait.

Her mien is humble, and with them
Her dignity she shares;
She would not that her lustrous eye
Should deem the light of theirs.

Upon the ground her beaming smiles
And blessings fall;
She kisses every folded flower
And every silent bird.

If, when we draw our curtains
We draw them not too tight;
She steals a glance into our room
And wishes us good night.

Gulliver was shipwrecked. He swam as well as he could. Luckily he reached the shore but could not see any houses or people on the shore. He was tired and the heat made him sleepy. When he woke up, he was surprised to see that he could not get up. He found that his arms and legs were fastened on each side to the ground. There were ropes across his body from his chest down to his thighs. He could only look up. Gulliver heard a noise close to him. He felt something moving on his left leg, which came up to his chin. Glancing down as far as he could he saw a man.

The man was only six inches high ! As Gulliver lay there bewildered by what he felt and saw, many more of these little men, climbed on him. They were very surprised to see such a big man as Gulliver was to see such small people. They were the Lilliputians.
