Q11. Which of the following can appropriately replace the highlighted word (A)?

In the following passage there are words given in bold, each of which has been denoted by a letter. For each highlighted word, four words are suggested, one of which replaces the bold word appropriately. If the given bold word is correct then choose "No replacement required" as your answer choice.

The resurgence of interest in 18th-century epistolary fiction highlights how written correspondence can drive complex narrative structures. Authors of this era used letters to broadcast(A) the internal psychological depth of their characters, offering readers direct access to raw, unmediated emotions. Crafting such a narrative required presumptuous (B) structural planning to ensure the timeline of exchanged letters remained perfectly coherent across multiple subplots. Literary conventions of the period disavow(C) that every fictional missive must accurately reflect the social status, regional dialect, and explicit intent of its sender. Furthermore, novelists focused on building narrative tension while sacrificing(D) the illusion of realism throughout the unfolding drama. Detailed textual annotations are now common in modern editions, helping contemporary audiences grasp subtle historical nuances. Today, these critical editions offer a redundant(E) window into the foundational shifts of early novelistic forms.
